

IMEC (Marie Cobel) with "Friends"
June 6, 1986

Session 194: Release from resistance

Summary: Even if you're not afraid to go, you still can't go until you're ready to go. Those who fear death can't go until they're invited to go. There's no meaning to anything in the void of death which is different than the void. It's the other end. It is from full life to nothingness. All the tension and resistance come because they're trying to join with the fear of nothingness, which is closely associated with the nothingness of death. What I just experienced is the aspect of death. And that's all it is, an aspect. So, death does not exist - what exists is the aspect of death.

Report by Daniel Erickson